SUMMER PROGRAMME AT EDHEC

An opportunity to gain credit and learn about vital business environments while discovering the South of France.

LEISURE AND LIFESTYLE

Free time and affluence, available to more and more people, is creating many new services and products that cater to quality of life. The enjoyment of lifestyle pursuits requires not only production, but continuous consumption making the leisure consumer a vital aspect of mature economies.

The pursuit of quality of life is a consumer trend, particularly noticeable in European democracies where citizens benefit from more vacation days than the world average. Many of the key industries generated by leisure, cluster around well-being services such as nutrition, fitness and diet programmes, whereas others are packaged as touristic and pitched to affluent working populations with economic means, but little free time.

Jobs in these industries spawn careers ranging from the functional areas of marketing, financial analysis, strategic consulting and corporate communication to new economy niches such as social media management, alternative tourism, coaching, “agritainment & agritourism” and digital product development.

ACADEMIC PROGRAMME

The EDHEC Summer Programme will examine a few mainstream players of the leisure economy, using models based in the region of Nice, Cannes and Monaco as live case studies of the companies and consumers that inhabit the leisure economy. Three focus courses will combine background literature, in situ learning and a consultancy based evaluation framework to become acquainted with this emerging part of today's economy.

◆ THE ECONOMIC CONTEXT OF LEISURE – 15 HOURS

This course will see leisure in terms of its macro-economic impact in France and in Europe. Providing a comparative framework for understanding growth markets in leisure and lifestyle products and services, the relative size and potential of different markets and different concentrations throughout France and Europe will be covered. This course will provide a general economic outlook on Leisure Markets in the 21st century (sectors, size, growth potential, key regions, key figures) drawing from a range of examples in lifestyle innovation, ecotourism, work/life balance trends and responses to recession. The development of the Eco-vallée in Nice will be a regional case in point for this course.

◆ CONSUMING LEISURE – 15 HOURS

This course will consider consumer analysis and market strategies for leisure and lifestyle considering new consumer profiles, ethics and sustainability trends as well as new service opportunities focused on the affluent and the retired. The course takes a panoramic view on consumer culture analysis methods, information gathering and emerging consumer socio-styles.

◆ LEISURE RESEARCH – 15 HOURS

This course takes a panoramic view of leisure and lifestyle and requires students to use the practical company visits to think about strategies and opportunities in these markets. With potential projects ranging from music events and sensation sports, to cultural and business tourism, projects can study “leisure” by examining communication strategies, techniques of retro-planning, consumer behaviour, growth opportunities and event management. Research based, this course is spread out over the summer course to guide students in collecting data, asking valid research questions and thinking about opportunities in leisure markets.
